

IMPORTANT NOTES

1. In doing my own job hunting, I found the following website that has several pages of typical questions from cognitive interviews asked when people are being interviewed. More and more companies and school districts are using cognitive interviewing, including Mayo Clinic. The url is http://www.quintcareers.com/sample_behavioral.html
2. A lot of the email address & emails are active links even though they don't look like it. Blame the new version of Word for this. Anyway, try Ctrl + Left Click to get them to work.
3. This list was prepared mostly for mathematics and statistics undergraduates at Winona State University in Minnesota. That is why it is biased towards Minnesota and Wisconsin.

WEBSITES WITH JOB OR INTERNSHIP LISTINGS

American Statistical Association: <http://jobs.amstat.org/search/results/> . Mostly Master's and Ph.D.. But, there are enough Bachelor's level jobs to make it worthwhile.

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA jobs webpage— <http://www.stat.ufl.edu/vlib/jobs.html> . Not very good lately. Hopefully it will improve.

Federal Committee on Statistical Methodology jobs page. <http://www.fcsm.gov/jobs/>

<http://www.usajobs.opm.gov/> . Seems to be the place to start when looking for US Government jobs. The terms to use separately to see all possible jobs that are statistical/mathematical are “statistician”, “statistics” and “quantitative” Don't let the term “statistician, mathematical” scare you when it comes up. It really also means applied statistics. Also, you can apply for jobs that say “statistician, survey” since most do not require experience in surveys. If you're looking for jobs with mathematics used in them, try “mathematician” and “mathematics”. Warning the words “statistics”, “quantitative” and “mathematics” will also yield many jobs that you don't fit.

<http://it.stlawu.edu/~rlock/statreu2005.htm> This website was created by a faculty member at St. Lawrence University (Robin Lock) and is a good place to start looking for internships.

The following websites are more general, but students have found them useful.

ISEEK (this is sponsored by State of Minnesota government)—looks decent. www.iseek.org

Wisconsin Job Center website (sponsored by State of Wisconsin)
<http://www.wisconsinjobcenter.org/wjc/>

www.monster.com (do searches separately using “statistician” and “statistics” as the keywords; if you want mathematics jobs use “mathematician” and “mathematics” separately.)

www.hotjobs.com (I found that using statistician gave many jobs. Using statistics as a keyword gave over 1000 jobs each time).
